Military Personnel: Deceptive and Misleading Life Insurance Sales Practices

It has come to the attention of the Kentucky Office of Insurance that there are disreputable agents selling life insurance products to military personnel using deceptive and misleading sales practices. These agents are specifically targeting young soldiers and recruits who may not understand or be able to afford the coverage. Federal and state laws prohibit the use of misleading and deceptive sales tactics under the Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices (UDAP) and the Unfair Insurance Practices (UNIP) acts.

The primary purpose of life insurance is to provide a death benefit for whomever you designate as your beneficiary. Life insurance should not be sold as an investment. Unfortunately there have been reports of dishonest agents in today's market who are misrepresenting the life insurance product they are selling. Some of these agents may be posing as financial counselors or advisors pertaining to veterans' benefits. Recent media reports indicate that these agents have been soliciting soldiers while on duty or in their barracks, which violates the U.S. Department of Defense regulations. In order to make the sale, some agents have been presenting their products, often in a classroom environment, as a type of savings or investment plan when in reality it's a life insurance policy. Some agents have also misled their clients by not informing or explaining thoroughly the limitations of liability that apply to the policy per KRS 304.15-260. For example, the policy may include exclusions if death is a result of war or the action of a military force. In addition, recent reports have found there are agents urging consumers to replace their current insurance policies with new or upgraded ones, which may or may not benefit the policyholders. Be cautious when making changes to any insurance policy. Any concerns you may have about your policy should be directed to the Kentucky Office of Insurance.

Life insurance can be one of the most important financial purchases a person will make in his/her lifetime. Take the time to review your policy carefully and be aware that every policy has a specific timeframe to accomplish the review. This "free look period" can be found on the cover page of the policy. If you are unsure about anything in the contract, ask your agent to go over any questions you may have. It would also be wise to check out the agent and the company's financial history before you buy.
